Master's students who pass the degree examination but do not complete their thesis revisions and submit the final thesis by the required deadline will be considered continuing students in the following semester. Their degree examination results will be retained, and they will become eligible for graduation only after the thesis has been submitted. The semester in which the thesis is submitted will be recorded as the semester of graduation. Students must register for the following semester but do not need to reapply for the degree examination. If the thesis is not completed by the 15th week of the following semester, the original degree examination result will no longer be recognized and will be counted as one failed attempt. This provision does not apply to exchange students, dual-degree students, or students enrolled in a teacher education program.

※申請論文延後公開，應於學位考試前由考試委員審查確認是否涉及機密、專利事項或依法不得提供。Students applying for a thesis embargo must have the examination committee review and confirm, before the degree examination, whether the thesis contains confidential information, involves patent-related matters, or is prohibited from disclosure by law.
